What We're Saying

Every designer should C.U.S.

Why the disparity between our own site and the work in our portfolio?

Design Challenge #1

▶ Challenge

Large horizontal bands of color

▶ Solution

- ▶ if band contains text - must be flexible and grow vertically
- ▶ if band contains only images - can have a height
- ▶ don't use a single background image on the body for the entire area

- ▶ use multiple wrappers for each band that needs to expand
 - the outer wrapper contains the background image or color
 - the inner wrapper constrains the content area (and may contain a second dividing image like a separating drop shadow or glow)

Cufón Font Replacement - The Good and The Bad

ERIK OLSON, ON THE TOPIC OF CSS AND JAVASCRIPT AND OPINIONS/REVIEWS APR 13 16

As soon as designers got ahold of the web as a design medium (probably about 15 years ago), they were thinking about fonts, right? (It was at least in the top five on the "first things to think about" list). So, in an age where tens of thousands of fonts have been invented, why are we mostly still using the same six?

Techniques like image replacement and sIFR have done us well. They remain the strongholds until something better comes along -- which may have just happened: namely, I'm talking about Cufón by Simo Kinnunen.

Cufón (I'm pronouncing it "koo-fon") is a font-replacement technique that uses javascript and vector graphics to write fonts from a font file (TTF, OTF or PFB) to your browser. It's easier/safer to use than sIFR and lighter on size than image replacement, but has the same copyright issues as both.

WHAT DOES CUFÓN DO?

The way Cufón works is pretty smart and highly technical. A proprietary javascript rendering engine takes your font file and converts it to a vector form. From there, it's translated to VML (Vector Markup Language). The result? Essentially, the font outline is written as JSON and converted into lots of numbers that define every curve and angle of its shape. The html5 canvas element is used to display the font in most browsers while VML is used in Internet Explorer (kudos to IE who has supported VML since IE5.5. VML is a very fast way to display vector graphics).

WHAT'S GOOD ABOUT IT?

Ease of Use. The process involves uploading your font file to the script

Vagabond Tabs

February 25th, 2009

Driving a car requires that you focus your attention on the road and keep your hands on the steering wheel. Towards that end, many car manufacturers position controls (such as those for the radio or air conditioner) on the steering wheel — either on the “spokes” that attach the wheel grip to the steering column, or on surfaces mounted behind the grip, close enough that they can be reached without letting go of the steering wheel.

But imagine if auto makers took this to an extreme, and put those controls at the ten o'clock and two o'clock position, where you hold the wheel, and actually mounted the buttons exactly under your fingers and hands — right on the surface of the steering wheel grip. Anytime you tried to turn the wheel you had to be extra careful that you didn't change the radio station, or turn on the heater.

That's what Apple has done with the tabs in Safari 4.

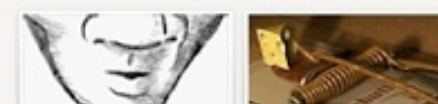

The title bar used to be a nice, clean expanse of chrome that served as an indicator as to which document or application was associated with a window, and served as a safe area to grab and move the window around your screen. Not so in the Safari 4 beta. Tabs have migrated northwards in the browser window, and made their home in the formerly pristine title bar.

Sure, you can still use the title bar to move the window, but it's no longer a sure thing. The very fact that the tabs are there creates ambiguity. You're

Design Challenge #3

▶ Challenge

Designing in a defined box - Postcard style

▶ Solution

- ▶ backgrounds must have at least a small piece that repeats vertically so pages can grow with content or text resizing
- ▶ don't use heights on divs containing text (page should not have inner scroll bars or text that disappears)
- ▶ for “paper” look, let only the top and bottom be crumpled
- ▶ add tiny differences to the repeat occasionally by placing a small random graphic on top

Get Hired!

Welcome to Belvedere!!

We here at Belvedere Inc have been bringing inspiring spaces to the Metaverse world of Second Life for over four years... (?) It's hard to believe that it's been that long.

As a small, mighty team we have been a creative force in building today's Metaverse. Belvedere Inc has been tackling projects of all scope and scandal from large public ventures to small, private matters of seclusion.

Exploring this site will give you a feel for our company and our community. Residents of our public estates in Second Life will also find useful community information and important announcements.

Your dream project is probably a mixture of wild imagination and strict organization. Our answer is always the same: "Yep! We have a guy who does that!"

Hello World

When I was a child, I had a dream that I could sketch out my ideas on a piece of paper, and they would spring off the page and come to life. I never let go of that dream, and now I wish to share it with you. My name is Franklin Lyons and I am an artist and designer, a programmer and a dreamer. This site is a showcase of my work and my way to communicate with the world.

My Featured Work:

When it's all over - lay me down with a paintbrush in my hand.

I painted most of these pieces while in college. With a constant flow of inspiration and creative energy around me, I could have continued painting forever.
